TELL

Plan on spending some time this week reflecting on today's lesson and the memory verse. You should only plant now what you want to harvest later. Try to fill in the blanks of today's memory verse. Look up Galatians 6:7 to check your answers.

"Be not _____; God is not _____: for whatsoever a man _____, that shall he also _____."
Galatians 6:7

Pray that God will convict you of areas in your life that you need to change. Are there some weeds in the garden of your life?

Participate in doing something good this week, and share it with your class next week. How can you do good this week?

HUE'S HISTORY

Planting what you want to harvest is a concept based on a God-ordained, common-sense law of nature: you reap what you sow. Believers should always live today with their eyes on the future. You choose whether your life will revolve around the sinful, the temporary or the spiritual. Sowing to the flesh never results in anything positive. Don't focus on lesser, temporary things. Only plant what you want to harvest!

HUE'S HISTORY

Roman citizenship was valuable, and came with special benefits and protections in Paul's day. Often, Christians in Roman society were considered insignificant or disloyal to Roman authorities. But, because of their faith in Christ, believers had a new identity.

Paul wrote to the Ephesian believers as encouragement in their true identities and purposes. While the Romans still might look down on them, they were united with the saints and all those who belong to the family of God.

Do you ever loose focus of what should be the foundation for your life?
